ADVOCACY / DÉFENSEUR

CACCN and CANN recognizing that Chronic Hand Eczema is a significant occupational health concern for Canadian nurses recently sent a unified letter to Dr. L Chapman, PhD, RN, CNO of Canada and to Dr. V Grdias, PhD, RN, CEO, CNA as well as provincial nursing officers and our nursing association colleagues advocating for hand eczema to be recognized as a significant occupational health issue and that Health Canada and the CNA champion initiatives that prioritize prevention, protection, early intervention and appropriate care for nurses across the country. Read the letter and view the survey!

Reconnaissant que l'eczéma chronique des mains constitue un problème important de santé au travail pour les infirmières canadiennes, l'ACCN et la CANN ont récemment envoyé une lettre commune au Dr L. Chapman, PhD, RN, directrice des soins infirmiers du Canada, et au Dr V Grdias, PhD, RN, PDG de l'AIIC, ainsi qu'aux responsables provinciaux des soins infirmiers et à nos collègues des associations d'infirmières, afin de plaider en faveur de la reconnaissance de l'eczéma des mains comme un problème important de santé au travail et pour que Santé Canada et l'AIIC soutiennent des initiatives qui accordent la priorité à la prévention, à la protection, à l'intervention précoce et aux soins appropriés pour les infirmières et infirmiers de tout le pays. Lisez la lettre et consultez le sondage ! ### Who Decides? Power, Protection, and Paternalism in Critical Care

The Architecture of Difficult Conversations: Civil Discourse Across Fields

Massey College, Toronto

February 2nd, 5:00-6:30pm

In the ICU, clinicians, researchers, and ethics boards frequently make judgement calls about what families can handle- which conversations to have, which options to offer, and which decisions families are 'ready for.' This panel explores essential questions about civil discourse in critical care. When does protecting families turn into removing choice and deciding for them, and how can we have civil discourse when the stakes are so high?
